

Description: Mount Laurel Animal Hospital is looking to hire an avian/exotics veterinary fellow to join our team. The purpose of this program is to train doctors, primarily, in advanced exotic medicine and surgery. This program would refine and build upon your exotic medicine and surgical skills, with the added bonus of working with other specialists in a large, referral hospital setting. A background in small animal primary care, emergency medicine, and exotic general practice is strongly recommended, prior to application.

We are a busy privately-owned specialty, 24/7 emergency, and general practice which is built around a collaborative culture. Our team is made up of over 60 veterinarians with several board-certified specialists including internal medicine, surgery, oncology, radiology, ophthalmology, an in-house clinical pathologist, radiology, behavioral medicine, neurology, and full-time critical care coverage. We have 4 exotic veterinarians with coverage 7 days a week and our fully staffed ER team is available 24/7 to support a heavy exotic caseload. We are well staffed with 170+ support staff and highly trained nurses including several veterinary technician specialists.

Our exotics service sees a wide range of primary care, advanced and emergency cases. Our location in the tristate area combined with a 24/7 emergency service leads to a high case load of exotic patients. We treat small mammals, avian, reptile, amphibian, and occasional aquatic species. In addition, we occasionally provide triage care for rehabilitation centers for wildlife patients. We are equipped with facilities to provide 24 hour ICU care to exotic patients.

Our hospital has just completed a large 22,000 sqft expansion. We are fully equipped with a Toshiba 64 Slice CT, MRI, rigid and flexible endoscopic equipment, a fully integrated in-house laboratory, surgical suites, ultrasound, digital radiography, therapy laser, surgical laser, Snyder oxygen cages, chemotherapy hood, and a fully stocked pharmacy. Our expansion included a dedicated exotics ward, surgery suite, and minimally invasive procedure/dental room.

Skills & Qualifications: Preference will be given to doctors with experience with primary care or emergency medicine; however, new graduates may be considered. We look forward to hiring a person who is highly motivated, organized, and friendly. We are looking for someone who will embrace our philosophy of top-notch customer service, outstanding client and patient care, and team work.

Location: Our hospital is located in Mount Laurel, NJ which is a convenient 20-25 minute commute from Philadelphia and only 1hr drive to the Jersey Shore.

Position: A full time flexible work schedule, competitive salary, and comprehensive benefits package will be provided to the candidate. Our benefits package includes health, vision, and dental insurance, 401K match, CE allowance, an internal bonus system, and vacation time.
